Sands for Singapore Festival presents ‘The Art of Shopping’
Integrated resort joins efforts with local charity Art Outreach to raise funds in support of art education

Singapore (25 July 2013) – This August, Sands for Singapore, Marina Bay Sands' Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) programme, will be collaborating with one of its designated charities, Art Outreach Singapore, to raise funds in support of the local art educational programmes.

As one of the key segments at the Sands for Singapore Festival (16-18 August 2013), The Art of Shopping is a public silent charity auction which will be held from 12-17 August at The Shoppes at Marina Bay Sands. ArtScience Museum and The Shoppes at Marina Bay Sands will be donating over 20 signature pieces, all with unique artistic interventions, for bidding with all proceeds going to Art Outreach.

These pieces will be transformed into one-of-a-kind art exhibits under the influence of 14 promising local urban artists chosen by Art Outreach. Known for their outstanding contemporary artistry, these local talents will embellish each item in their novel artistic ways.

Mae Anderson, Chairman of Art Outreach Singapore, said, "We are very excited to partner Marina Bay Sands in its inaugural Sands for Singapore Festival and even more thrilled to share the same passion towards advocating art education and appreciation in the local community. Marina Bay Sands is a valued partner and patron in this collaboration as they have been an avid supporter of Art Outreach since 2009, and more importantly, whose investment in architecture and design represents both a strong commitment to visual art and provides extraordinary examples of a confluence of excellent art, architecture and design.

"The Art of Shopping has been an inspiring journey thus far and we cannot wait to display the quality artworks of our local talents at the upcoming charity auction. We will like to thank Marina Bay Sands for providing this invaluable platform for our artists to showcase their exceptional talents."

Upon completion, these artistically enhanced pieces will be exhibited in-store at The Shoppes from 7 August 2013 for all to view over the long National Day weekend. Interested members of the public will get a chance to cast bids on cards at participating stores from 12-17 August 2013. These bids will culminate at an exclusive live auction and cocktail

In the 1940s, Charles and Ray Eames were looking forward to new materials, new techniques, and new shapes. Excited by the potential of plastics to do “more for less”, they adapted their innovative moulding techniques to produce shells that would conform to the shape of the body. They also perfected another manufacturing technique, creating a bent, welded wire base. The result was the first mass-producible single-shell plastic chair. With no upholstery and no covering, Charles and Ray remained true to their design philosophy, allowing the actual materials of the chair to take centre stage.

In the late 1940s, Charles noted the “fantastic things being made of wire.” That fascination led them to experiment with metal wire rods and mesh, and eventually to develop a mass-production technique for simultaneously welding wire rods—an innovation that resulted in many pieces that have become classics of modern design, including wire chairs, plastic chairs with wire bases, storage units, and elliptical tables. Another result was this compact table, introduced in 1950. Legend has it that these tables were made from material left over from cutting the Elliptical tables out of sheets of plywood. The Eameses used them to conduct chanoyu, the traditional Japanese tea ceremony, for special guests, including sculptor Isamu Noguchi and film pioneer Charlie Chaplin. Today these lightweight, diminutive tables stand on their own, next to beds and chairs as an accompanying surface, or on top of each other in a convenient stack.

ARTIST Sabotage
The identity Sabotage was created in 2003 by Singaporean artist Mark Ong. Fuelled by his need to create a new look of sneakers, Mark started his career as a hobby sneaker painter, working out of his parents’ kitchen.

His first claim to fame came after he won a sneaker customizing competition on the Nike Talk Forum. His winning submission gained massive attention from the sneaker industry, and Sabotage instantly became a name synonymous with the art of sneaker customization.

Since then, Sabotage has been invited to commission designs for sneaker industry giants like Nike, DC shoes and New Balance. The most notable was 2006’s Asia-exclusive release of the Nike Sabotage SB Dunk which drew overnight crowds region wide and sold out within an hour of launch in every country it sold in.

In 2010, after his travels to Mexico, Paris and Manila, Mr Sabotage got inspired to evolve his craft onto a larger canvas. Inspired by traditional hand painted signs, Mark embarked on a new journey as a visual artist with his beloved wife and business partner, Sue.

ARTIST Trase
Sufian Hamri is an interdisciplinary artist with knowledge deeply rooted in graffiti and street art who first made his mark on the streets in 1999, painting street murals and creating illustrations for shops, festivals and ad hoc advertisements on commission. His extensive involvement in community service earned him the SSF Star Youth Leader Award in 2005. That same year, he became the pioneer recipient of the inaugural Goh Chok Tong Youth Promise Award, the highest award ever conferred to a street artist of which to date, he is the only street artist to be given such an honour by a Senior Minister. Sufian is interested in social/cultural behavior and current affairs, and very often engages the viewer to identify underlying issues hidden beneath his subversively playful and conceptually witty intervention works. His paintings are not merely visuals on surface; they interact with the canvas or its space to create a more intimate relationship between subject and surface.

ARTIST STATEMENT
Sticker Bombing is an integral part of graffiti culture; it is a ‘name card’ that is given away, exchanged with fellow graffiti artists at ever meet, or pasted at every street corner, power box, bus stop, lamp post, wall, etc. The collection grows at every graffiti jam as artists keep printing and exchanging stickers. They remind us who we’ve met and where we’ve been. The plethora of stickers pasted all over the suitcase suggests just that. Stickers collected by some of the best graffiti practitioners all over the world indicate the travels of the bearer and his/her social status amongst the graffiti community.

ARTIST Philip Hemnell
Phillip Hemnell is a Eurasian artist and collector. On July 6th, this year, Philip exhibited prized pieces from his personal collection alongside new original work at Galerie Steph. Titled “Urban Eurasian”, after the artist’s own Eurasian heritage, the show was reflective of Hemnell’s eclectic taste and extensive travels. From Ipoh to New York, as the title suggests, “Urban Eurasian” was a mellifluous mélange of artistic genres.

ARTIST STATEMENT
“The design theme was conceptualized by wanting to incorporate iconic Asian motifs onto the bag, with the images applied to the bag using acrylic spray paint and hand cut stencils. The images are not supposed to be rigidly defined and stenciling gives a softer feel to the edges as the paint tends to find its own way under the boundaries of the stencils. One side of the bag is decorated in Chinese-style clouds which symbolise good fortune and happiness in Chinese paintings. The other side has a more quirky combination of motifs. Bamboo represents durability and vigour in Chinese art as it is delicate in appearance yet known for its strength. The rice cooker is something that appears throughout my art portfolio as I wanted a utilitarian symbol that most people have in their houses and would not normally associate as an object worthy of painting. Lastly, from my collection of old toys, there are two Astroboys standing guard, which is a nod to the Japanese origin of the bag as the bright silicone bag was manufactured in Japan.”
